Sir,

I take the liberty of forwarding, by post, a copy of the first volume of a Sanskrit work, just published at my instance, for the favour of its submission to His Highness the Maharaja.

This is the first time the work appears in print. The attention of the general public was drawn to it not very long ago by Babu Bagavandas, M.A., of Benares, an erudite scholar who had for many years been the Honorary Secretary of the Central Hindu College and who has rendered great service in connection with the establishment of the Hindu University. He published between 1910 and 1912 a masterly abstract English translation of the work in three volumes. A careful study of them impressed me with the necessity for publishing the original treatise itself in the interests of Indian Sanskrit literature. As I understood it was not likely that the work of publishing it would be undertaken by its learned translator I obtained through his kindness the manuscript copy which he had used for his translation and took steps to publish it. The appearance of the present volume is the result. It has been prepared for the press with much care and after deep study by the Editor, Pandit K.T. Srinivasa Chariar who brought to the task special qualifications in that he belongs to an indigenous esoteric organisation called Sudda Dharma Mandalam, among the members of which are a number of learned ascetics and yogis who are custodians of many rare and valuable books. Some of these books are being allowed within the past few years, to be publicly known.

2 13

Pranava Vada, which is held in the highest esteem by the members of the said fraternity, is one of the works thus allowed to see the light of the day.

In my English Foreword to the volume I have endeavoured to give a brief account of the teachings of the Rshi the author. His aim in the work is the noble one of synthesising and reconciling the different systems of Indian thought so as to put an end to the mischief due to the prevalence of conflicting creeds. That aim the Rshi, if I may venture to say so, successfully accomplishes not only by convincing arguments addressed to reason, but also by taking his stand on the high authority of Scriptural passages and basing the whole structure on Pranava accepted on all hands as Para Brahma Vachchyam and the most complete and perfect symbol of the Supreme.

I presume to think that if the remaining portion of the treatise is also published and the whole of it comes to be studied by the thoughtful public it would result in a substantial gain to Hindu Religion, Ethics and Morals in as much as the liberal and sane views propounded by the Rshi cannot but tend gradually to lessen and eventually to eradicate the warring of creeds so injurious to social welfare. I beg to submit that the undertaking to place such a work within the reach of the general public is not unworthy of the patronage of His Highness's Government which is ever ready to promote and foster learning of every kind through the medium of the mother tongue of Arya Vartha.

In conclusion I pray that such support as His Highness may deem fit to grant be extended towards the present undertaking. I should add that two more volumes have to be published to complete the treatise; and the price of printing paper etc., has become so high since we bagan as to render our future expenses far heavier than was anticipated at the commencement.

I beg to remain,

Sir,

Your obedient servant,

Sd/ S. Subramania Iyer,

SIR,

With reference to your letter No.7228/Edn.22-15-129 dated the 7th instant sending for opinion a copy of the Volume I of the Sanskrit work "Pranava Vada" of Maharshi Gargayana edited by - - Pandit K.T. Srinivasachariar with a copy of the letter from Sir S. Subramanya Iyer, I have the honour to state that this ~~work~~ is a rare work treating of Adwaita Philosophy. I enclose the opinions of Pandits Lakshmipuram Srinivasachar and Rajagopala Chakravarti. It is not quite certain that the work is one of remote antiquity and can claim all the merit which ~~it~~ is attributed to it. However, it is written on somewhat free rationalistic lines and I recommend that Government may be pleased to sanction the purchase of 25 copies of each of the three volumes of the work, the cost being met from the allotment in the Budget under the encouragement of authors .

The copy of the volume sent is returned herewith.

I have the honour to be,

Sir,

Your most obedient servant,

M. Shama Rao
